

BUILDING YOUR DIABETES PREVENTION PROGRAM

Your Pathway to Implementation and Reimbursement

Many diabetes education programs are currently seeing people with prediabetes but are not getting paid for these services. Why leave money on the table when there is now an avenue to get paid? Medicare reimburses for prevention services so now is the time to build your own DPP.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND:

Anyone interested in building or improving a DPP

WHAT TO EXPECT:

- Explain the evidence base for the CDC's National Diabetes Prevention Program (National DPP)
- List the Lifestyle Change Program participant eligibility, goals, curriculum delivery, required documentation, and data collection
- Review and explain CDC's DPRP standards and how programs can ensure success
- Explain AADE's role in the National DPP and opportunities for DSMES programs and diabetes educators to house their own DPP program
- Compare and contrast outcome data from the AADE DPP programs
- Develop a business plan to implement a prevention program into an already existing DSMES program
- Discuss considerations in the sustainability of a prevention program
- Discuss opportunities for multiple payers and the scaling of a DPP
- Discuss CPT codes for billing, coverage criteria for Medicare employer-based reimbursement
- Describe additional support and resources available at national, state and community levels
